

On your marks, get set, go! The weekend's first winner and a record-breaking Short Race

Annecy, May 24, 2019

In and around the iconic temporary village, among the 55 exhibitors (15 more than last year), 9000 runners from 65 countries and 30,000 visitors are expected for the 9th edition of the Salomon GORE-TEX® MaXi-Race! With 11 race formats over three days, this is the big weekend that kicks off the trail running season for thousands of amateurs, as well as for those elites who come to run in the mountains around Lake Annecy to compare themselves to their rivals as a prequel to the summer season's other major competitions.

A popular international event, the Salomon GORE-TEX® MaXi-Race is also eco-friendly. One of the major contributors to Annecy's popularity and development, it is only natural that the MaXi-Race employs a sustainable approach that is environmentally and socially responsible. As one of the pioneering races for the "Steps to Nature" program created in 2018, this year organizers have decided to implement several initiatives, including a used-shoe recycling program, a train/free photo package, aid stations with local and organic food, and a "drastic reduction" in the use of non-recyclable plastic bottles.

Battling it out for a podium spot

Among the runners in the Ultra-Race, the elites plan to keep the competition exciting from start to finish: the men's field includes François D'HAENE (France, 916 ITRA), Jason SCHLARB (USA, 887 ITRA), Donald CAMPBELL, (UK 824 ITRA), and for the women Andrea MACCHI and Sandrine BERANGER (France, 649 ITRA), American Jamie AARONS (614 ITRA), and Brit Carrie CRAIG will set the pace.

For the MaXi-Race, Michel LANNE (860 ITRA), Vincent VIET (843 ITRA), Hugo ALTMAYER (835 ITRA), Baptiste CHASSAGNE (831 ITRA), Canhua LUO (843 ITRA), along with Italians Stefano RINALDI (846 ITRA) and Riccardo BORGIALLI (839 ITRA) have all the right moves to win. For the women, Audrey BASSAC (673 ITRA) from France, and Italians Lisa BORZANI (695 ITRA) and Virginia OLIVERI (672 ITRA) will make for an unforgettable French/Italian duel.

On Sunday, the Marathon Race, part of the Golden Trail National Series, is the race format that draws France's best male and female athletes.

19:00: Kicking off the weekend's festivities with the Short-Race!

The first race of the 2019 Salomon GORE-TEX® MaXi-Race, the Short-Race is also the first and the only stage in France for the 2019 Mountain Running World Cup. Organized alongside the World Mountain Running Association (WMRA) in partnership with the IAAF, the World Cup circuit includes seven stages in seven countries.

At the start, at 19:08 on the dot for live coverage on France 3, and in spite of the menacing black clouds, 628 runners, including 187 women, sprinted out of Menthon-Saint-Bernard to run the 16km and 950m vertical gain as fast as possible. In front of hundreds of amateur runners, the serious faces on the elites revealed more than enough about their motivation. Winning the first stage of the Mountain Running World Cup means starting off the season with a majestic bang.

The race was short but intense. Andrew Douglas (GBR) crossed the finish line in 1 hour 15 minutes, breaking the Short-Race course record by 3 minutes. “A difficult race in an amazing setting. I’m pretty happy since at one point I made a wrong turn and had to backtrack. This was my first time in Annecy, and I’ll definitely be back.”

Less than one minute later, Andy Wacker (USA) finished second, with Kenyan Robert Panin another few seconds behind to round out a truly international podium.

Simon Paccard, the first youth runner to finish, placed 13th overall.

For the women, Kenyan Lucy Wambui Muigi finished 2 minutes in front of Ireland’s Sarah McCormack, with France’s Iris Pessey another 5 minutes behind.

Official results:

Men:

Andrew Douglas (GBR): 01:15:10

Andy Wacker (USA): 01:16:00

Robert Panin Surum (KEN): 01:16:11

Women:
